Beauty for YOU

The Secrets of Good Looks by Barbara Lynn

YOUR HAIR

Women's hair is more than ever their "crowning glory." A dull and faded head of hair detracts from a woman's appearance. And there's really no excuse for anything of the sort, nowadays, even if there ever was!

The secret of really shining hair is brushing—vigorous, persistent and frequent brushing. Don't be afraid to brush your hair, even if a few strands do come out. No matter how healthy your head and hair may be, some hairs will fall out each day. It is when the hairfall becomes excessive that remedial treatment is necessary. Keep your hair brushes immaculately clean; wash them often. This is important. And in brushing your hair be sure to brush away from the head—no down on it.

After you have brushed your hair, put a drop or two of brilliantine on the brush and impart it to the hair in that way. This will add the finishing touch, and ensure that you have a lovely sheen.

Dandruff is the chief hair worry. And despite general belief, it is NOT caused by dryness, but by a germ in the upper layer of the skin. A good hair tonic should be used to eradicate it, whilst tightly-fitting hats should be avoided, for they restrain ventilation and aggravate the disease.

If you have dry hair, scalp massage is called off, and here is the method to use. Place your fingers firmly on your scalp and rotate the scalp itself—but do not rub. Continue this treatment for a week or two, twice a day, and then gradually reduce the number.

My latest on "Your Hair" gives detailed advice on caring for the hair. You may obtain a copy, and any of the following leaflets, by sending a 5c stamp for each one required: Eye Beauty; Hand Beauty; Care of the Feet; Bust Development; Superfluous Hair; The Face and Its Care; How to Slim; Underweight; Reducing in Spots. At the same time, ask about your personal beauty worries.

Please mention the name of this paper, and address your letter to: Barbara Lynn, P.O. Box 75, Station B, Montreal, Que.

T.C.A. ENGINE TEST HOUSE RANES FIRST

Winnipeg. Rated by aeronautical engineers as the most efficient operated by any commercial airline in North America today, Trans-Canada Air Lines' engine test house is nearing completion at Stevenson Field, Winnipeg. Fashioned along the lines of the new test house of Pratt and Whitney at East Hartford, Connecticut, T.C.A.'s building symbolizes the trend toward the use of more powerful engines in modern commercial aircraft, and will be capable of testing motors almost twice as powerful as those now speeding huge Lockheed 14's across the Dominion on scheduled flights.

To power its 15 Lockheed aircraft and to provide spares during overhaul periods, Trans-Canada has 36 Pratt and Whitney Hornets of 800 h.p. and 17 supercharged Vasp Juniors. After each flight microscopic checkups are made of every working part and further checks are made at scheduled intervals as the mileage on the motor mounts up. At a point between its 400th and 600th hour in the air, after it has functioned approximately 80,000 miles, the motor is removed from the aircraft, undergoes complete overhaul and finally enters the test house where every phase of its performance is unerringly recorded. There, over a period of seven hours' constant operation, it is stepped up from idling speed to full throttle.

In constructing the building, Trans-Canada engineers paid special attention to the problem of minimizing noise and vibration, not only from the standpoint of observers at work in the test house but keeping in mind the personal comfort of residents in the vicinity of the airfield. The exterior walls are more than a foot thick and in addition a new type of sound-absorbing acoustic material lines the intake and exhaust stacks at the top of the building. Tests at Pratt and Whitney factories have shown that the noise emanating from the same type of test house is substantially below that from the older equipment.

The new structure contains numerous and interesting technical features. In a large steel and cement test chamber 18 feet in diameter the engine is mounted on cable suspensions, the ends of which are anchored in rubber-dressed mountings to provide a flexibility simulating as nearly as possible conditions encountered in actual flight. From his control room, equipped with controls and instruments, the highly-trained operator can observe through a shutter-proof and soundproof window the operation of the engine during its run. His dial readings, recorded every 15 minutes during the four hours of the test, show generated horsepower, fuel flow and fuel consumption, rate of oil flow through the motor, and consumption.

Temperatures at various points on the engine are checked and each instrument panel also carries a tachometer, fuel and oil pressure gauges, and remote reading thermometers for the measurement of oil and carburetor air temperatures.

Complete data on every fact entering into the operation of the high-powered motors will be available to engineers of Trans-Canada Air Lines when the modern equipment is installed and the test house ready for operation, probably in early December.

FASTEST BIRD NO MATCH FOR SPEEDY LOCKHEEDS

If the fastest flying bird and one of Trans-Canada Air Lines Lockheed 14's were to race non-stop from Winnipeg to Vancouver, each at top speed over the radio beam route of approximately 1,200 miles, the airliner would lower its wheels on Sea Island's runways almost four hours before its competitor sped into view.

In other words, the Lockheed, rated as the world's fastest commercial aircraft and capable of 260 miles an hour, would arrive at Vancouver less than five hours after it took off from Winnipeg, while the duck hawk would require eight and a half hours to traverse the same airway at its incredible speed of 140 miles an hour.

From an interesting article featured by The New York Times are derived many comparisons relative to the speed of aircraft and birds. While attempts to imitate the flapping wings of birds have been almost completely abandoned, much that has been helpful to aviation has been learned from bird flight since the Wright brothers gave powered wings to man at Kitty Hawk. Some of the wing characteristics of the successful S-42 Clippers are attributed to studies of the wing loadings of birds, such as the albatross, which are accustomed to make long-range flights in turbulent weather.

Some students of birds hold that the migratory species fly comparatively low and stop every now and again at sea for food and rest. However, hummingbirds are known to cross 200 miles of open sea between Yucatan and Cuba, and pilots have reported seeing birds of a number of species at all altitudes up to the highest normally flown. A school of thought is therefore developing which holds that birds may seek out the sub-tropical levels of upper air and there, propelled by steady high-velocity winds, rest on their wings.

Whatever the truth of this theory, man's flying machines have far surpassed the swiftest birds in point of speed. Competent American observers credit the duck hawk with being the fastest feathered thing, with a top speed of 140 miles an hour, and rate the golden eagle at 120 miles an hour. Colonel Richard Melnerthagen, the European expert who has measured the speed of bird flight with anti-aircraft instruments, finds the lammergeier, the huge vulture bird of prey, the fastest of the Old World birds at 110 miles, with the swallows next at 106. Then, according to his figures, come the kestrel at 80, ducks at 59, geese at 55, pelicans at 51, starlings and storks at 48, and homing pigeons at 36, while the wagtails can make but 30 miles an hour. What a surprise it must be to the former kings of the air to see a two-passenger transport airplane cruising by at 200 or better.

CANCER QUACKS

The American Cancer Bulletin for October features an article on the subject of Cancer Quacks. It points out that if there be things more heartless than the exploiting of sufferers from so dreaded a disease as cancer, it is impossible to think of them. The most serious factor associated with such exploitation is the awakening of false hopes in the minds of those who are dying and of those on whom they depend for aid. The mental anguish is just as great whether the cure is fraudulent in both its invention and its exploitation or whether it is put forward by a misguided charlatan.

"The cancer quack," the article goes on to say, "like all other charlatans pretends to knowledge he does not possess, and makes claims far beyond the evidence in support of them. Today there is no scientific evidence to prove that any serum, drug, or combination of drugs, will cure cancer. Nevertheless charlatans are applying caustic pastes, injecting mixtures of bacterial debris, and exalting useless mixtures of glands in relation to the cure of cancer."

Some years ago the American Society of the Control of Cancer offered a prize to the one who first developed a cure for cancer. There were 2,500 applicants. These submitted mixtures developed by an Indian squaw, a blacksmith, and other equally qualified persons, with in every instance, the claim that the method had worked successfully in hundreds of cases known to the applicant. Not a single one of these cures was worth the paper it was written upon. Not one of the 2,500 applications offered even a lead toward experimentation.

The only known cures of cancer (and the American College of Surgeons has proof of cure in some 30,000 cases) are found to result from early treatment by surgery, x-rays and radium. It is most important that persons learn the very early signs of cancer and then recognize the fact that diagnosed in its incipient stage cancer may be cured.

The World of Wheat

H. Q. L. Strange.

Director, Research Department, Seale Grain Company, Ltd.

"Agriculture in the first place, is not only an art but an important and noble art. It is, as well, a science, which teaches what crops are to be planted in each kind of soil, and what operations are to be carried on, in order that the land may regularly produce the largest crops. Equipped with this knowledge the farmer should aim at two goals, profit and pleasure the object of the first is material gain, and of the second enjoyment."

This remarkable piece of wisdom, setting out in memorable words the very heart and soul of agriculture, was written by one of the greatest agriculturists the world has known—Marcus Terentius Varro—Senator of Rome, about 50 B.C., just over 2,000 years ago, in his book entitled "On Agriculture".

The pleasure and enjoyment, of which Varro writes, is no doubt that exalted feeling which comes to those who in their work are striving to excel, who are aiming to achieve the highest possible skill in their craft, and who experience such a love and pride in their work that they become veritably inspired with a desire to attain perfection itself.

Fortunate indeed the farmer who has received this ancient material return, and who can experience too the enjoyment of which Varro speaks.

Following factors have tended to raise price: Very small wheat surplus remaining in Australia—Russia faced the acute food shortage—Winter wheat sowing backward in Germany—Mexico buying U.S. wheat—More frost reported in Argentina—Crop prospects in Australia continue to deteriorate—Delays in harvesting root crops in Germany.

BIRDS AND BEASTS

REQUIRE MINERALS

The value of mineral supplements in the feed of poultry and birds is fully recognized in the British Isles where lack of certain essential minerals has been found responsible for various diseases affecting livestock. In August and September B. Leslie Ennis, well-known Canadian chemist-agronomist, had opportunity to confer with specialists in animal nutrition at the Rowett Research Institute, Aberdeen, and at the agricultural research station of Jealott's Hill, Bracknell, Bucks, England.

At Jealott's Hill there has been established a game research department for the study and breeding of grouse, partridges, pheasants, ducks, snipes and other wildfowl and, by the addition of minerals to their feed, to develop healthier, stronger birds immune to the pests—other than sportsmen—which menace their existence. Someone facetiously remarked that the object of this game research is the evolution of a partridge so strong and elusive on the wing that instead of the estimated average of eight, twelve shells will be required to bag one bird! While this is definitely not the primary object of the research, it may be incidentally one of its results, though the increased number of more vigorous birds may still afford the shooter a reasonable sporting chance!

A COLD CLIMATE

WATER SYSTEM

Water on tap in stable and corral is a great boon. When the horse barn was built on the premises of the Dominion Experimental Substation at Beaverlodge, Alberta, in 1934 a cement-walled root cellar was provided across the north end, states W. D. Albright, the Superintendent. Though largely above the natural ground level it has, with the aid of good interior insulation and exterior banking, kept potatoes without frost injury through four winters.

In this root cellar there was constructed a rectangular concrete water reservoir, 600 feet inside dimensions and 15 feet high, running up about five feet into the loft, where it is jacketed with shavings and is usually kept covered with straw during cold weather. The tank walls are 12 inches thick at the bottom, tapered exteriorly to 6 inches at the top, and stand completely clear of the cellar wall. Floor and walls were constructed all in one day and were made with 1 1/2 to 1 mix, the gravel being clean and well proportioned as to sand and pebbles. The tank was washed with cement on the inside and has never leaked save very slightly just at first in a few places where the "form" wires passed through the walls. These few slight leaks were quickly stopped with wood splinters driven into the openings from the outside. The tank is filled with a windmill driven pump having a three-way underground delivery. The water pipe is laid in a wooden box which is 6 1/2 feet deep where it is outdoors but rises to 3 feet beneath the root-cellar floor.

The water delivers into the tank horizontally about a foot from the bottom and the 2-inch draw-off pipe is also a foot from the floor, giving a twelve-inch depth for accumulation of the fine mineral sediment always present in the water as pumped. The sediment built up only about half an inch the first year. The water comes through the taps clear as crystal.

Unions make it possible to disconnect the pipes at the reservoir without loosening the horizontal lengths embedded in the wall. Valves control back-flow in case of emergency. The draw-off pipe is carried in the same wooden box that conveys the pipe running from pump to the tank and this box also affords drainage for the occasional overflow of the tank, for the drip from the petcock at the pump, and for the drip from the two hydrants (one in the stable and one in the corral). The drain leads to a sand layer down the slope from the corral hydrant. At two critical points the wooden box containing the pipe is covered by an inverted wooden trough, giving a double air space between earth and the pipe. No packing was used lest it become damp and thus lose its insulating value.

As an extra precaution the ground over the pipe line is covered each year with a broad band of horse manure. The pump is set in a 6 1/2-foot cement-walled pit stuffed with four-foot depth of shavings. The pump pipe is drained in cold weather by a petcock operated by a lever at the top. In winter the lever is wired so as to ensure the petcock being always left open.

Since the system was installed there have been no winters in which extreme cold weather coincided with prolonged cold snaps in each of two winters, viz., 1934-35, when January had a mean temperature of -5.60 degrees Fahrenheit, and 1935-36, when February with a mean of -16.19 degrees Fahrenheit, proved the coldest month on record at the Substation. There was also a decidedly cold snap in January of 1937.

There has never been a hydrant stiff to turn and rarely has it been necessary to pump a stroke by hand, although five households and from fifteen to fifty head of horses and cattle or their equivalent are supplied from the tank.

VACATIONIST'S TURN

TO WINTER MONTHS
Jasper, Alta.—Featuring circle trips over the thrilling skiing terrain of Maligne and into the Tekarra Basin and Shovel Pass, with stopover at comfortable chalets in the very heart of unsurpassed alpine snowlands, the Jasper Ski Club has prepared an extensive program for the coming winter. One of the ski trips covers more than 70 miles of varying slopes, and from January to May will provide facilities for every phase of the winter sport.

Planned primarily for winter vacationists, the circle tours vary from three days' duration to two weeks. But for the myriad of skiers who prefer to make permanent headquarters at one camp or chalet and enjoy the long alpine slopes of the immediate area, accommodation has also been arranged.

Yearly, skiing in the Canadian Rockies has become more popular with the ever-increasing number of Canadians choosing the snow season for their annual vacation. Early enquiries to Major Fred Brewster, ski guide at Jasper, indicate that the 1939 season will bring hundreds of skiers to the mountains, not only from the prairie provinces and the coast, but from as far east as Toronto and Montreal.

The Family Doctor

by JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D., F.F.

VACCINES—AND THE RELIABLE FAMILY DOCTOR
There can be no doubt of the value of certain vaccines in the prevention and treatment of epidemic disease. By the intelligent use of this method, much suffering can be avoided, and many conditions alleviated. Medical science has practically abolished typhoid fever, malaria, small-pox, yellow fever, and other infectious diseases—and has shown diphtheria, scarlet fever, tetanus, hydrophobia and other fatal maladies of much of their terrors.

In an epidemic of influenza, I once gave prophylactic vaccines to twenty-five patients. Twenty-three of them passed through the scourge without contracting disease, although several of them lived in infected families. The other two fared not so well; one of them had the "flu" when he took the first injection, the other, a tubercular, also well along with the disease, died of broncho-pneumonia in spite of the efforts of myself and an able consultant.

Since then I have given immunizing vaccines to many people and have found the precaution most satisfactory for the patients and myself. If your occupation exposes you to any epidemic disease, I would advise you strongly to permit your physician to immunize you by giving you appropriate vaccination, using the product of a reliable maker of the most proven quacks; so be on your guard. It is usually safe to conclude that medical advertisers, who "guarantee results," are imposters, who are trying to get your money for nothing. I advise that you exercise good judgment and trust your reliable family doctor.

HELP YOUR POSTMASTER

Christmas is over three weeks away. It seems quite a long time. But as day after day slips past we are apt, in the growing rush of the Christmas season, to let one thing and another slip and go by undone, until we suddenly wake up, with the big day just a week or so ahead. We suddenly remember that we have forgotten to mail those Christmas cards and those odd Christmas parcels.

Then there's a hustle and bustle to buy cards, and presents, and get them to the post office, so that they will arrive at their destination before Christmas. So Uncle Joe, and sister Susie and the rest of your friends and relatives won't feel that they have been forgotten until too late.

This is all very well for you. It will make you hurry a bit, perhaps, but it's soon over. However, it's not quite so easy for the postmaster and the postal service in general. Just compare the amount of mail you send and receive about Christmas time with the normal amount for the rest of the year, and multiply that amount by the number of people in Canada, and you'll get a vague idea of what they are up against.

Why not make their task easier, and make sure that your friends will not be disappointed by mailing your Christmas parcels, letters and cards early. When you feel like asking a favor of your postmaster ask yourself: "If everybody was just like me, what sort of job would postmaster be?"

WARNING RE RECENT MINERAL TAXATION

The Editor:
Dear Sir,—It seems not to be generally known in this district that a Mineral Taxation Act was passed at the last session of the provincial legislature, and a short synopsis may be of benefit to the holders of mineral rights in this oil field.

The Act provides for a tax of one-third of one cent per acre on all mineral rights held by the owners of the land, but not on minerals held under lease from the government.

A penalty of ten per cent. of the amount of tax is imposed for failure to pay the tax before September 1st in any year.

If default is made in payment, the Act provides for notification of the default to be sent to the mineral owner.

In case default is made for three months after notification is sent the minerals become the property of the Crown, and provision is made that the mineral rights if forfeited to the Crown may be redeemed before the first day of March following.

The tax is payable to the minister of municipal affairs at Edmonton.

E. A. HAYES.

AMONG THE OLD-TIMERS

"REMINISCENCES OF OTHER DAYS"

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO

The new U.G.G. elevator which was built to replace the one destroyed by fire recently, was completed during the past week and Mr. O'Leary is now in charge.

Mr. Alex Rostand and family left to spend the winter months in Oregon.

Sponsored by the Wainwright Dramatic Club, Miss Elsie McLuhan of Winnipeg gave an evening's entertainment last week.

Mr. A. E. Mills is now around again after being laid up with an attack of pneumonia.

Mr. A. F. Kohl underwent an operation in the city during the past week.

Married quietly at Viking on Saturday were Miss Annie Bjertnes and Mr. D. Rostand, both of Wainwright.

TEN YEARS AGO

Fire which started in the baggage room at the extreme west end of the local C.N.R. depot completely destroyed that structure on Wednesday evening. It was first discovered at around seven o'clock and two hours later it had completely burned itself out. Most of the records were saved but all the belongings of the waitresses on the second floor were lost, as well as goods stored in the basement.

Mr. E. E. Mayer, who spent the summer and fall months in this district, left last week for his home in Spokane, Wash.

Miss Agnes Horne celebrated her birthday by entertaining a number of her young friends at a party on Saturday.

A car driven by Jack Hayden turned over on the slippery roads, smashing the top and doing other damage to the vehicle. The passengers, luckily, all escaped injury.

Mr. John Winters, of Battleview, lost his barn by fire last Monday evening.

The annual bazaar of the United church L.A. netted that organization the nice sum of $200 for their efforts.

According to wired advices received by Mayor Foster, the new Federal Building at Wainwright will be erected by the Permanent Construction Co. of Edmonton, their tender having been accepted by the government.

The town hockey club held their re-organization meeting last week end and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Hon. pres., Mr. McCrear; hon. vice-pres., Mr. M. L. Foster; pres., Mr. W. S. Clark; vice-pres., Mr. G. C. Siddall; secretary, Mr. W. R. Stewart; executive, Messrs. F. Dickens and E. L. Cork.

North Edgerton

Our thermometers are very busy these days going up and down. One morning it is 5° below zero and the next morning 20° above.

Miss Evelyn Newell is spending a few days with Faye Boukes at Heath.

Mr. Belk, Mike and Lena motored to Wainwright last Monday, where Mr. Belk had his usual attendance and Lena had some dental work done.

Mr. and Mrs. Rose and family of Irma, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Hansen.

Miss Editha Thorpe is staying with her sister, Mrs. W. Stoddart in Paradise Valley. We are sorry to say that Mr. W. Stoddart is ill in an Edmonton hospital but we sincerely wish him a speedy recovery.

Olle Haugen had the misfortune to lose one of his heirs. She got in between two granaries which were standing quite close together and smothered to death in a very short time.

SYDENHAM

School re-opened last Monday, Mr. K. Hutchison having recovered from his accident.

Mr. C. McDonald returned to his home last Saturday feeling much better in health after his recent operation.

Mrs. Ted Goddard, from Gilt Edge, and Mrs. Gordon Carl of Greenshield, were visiting on Sunday at the home of their parents.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Haire on the birth of a daughter, born last Sunday, November 20th, at the Wainwright hospital.

A pie social was held at the school house Friday evening, November 25th funds going for the Christmas tree.

Mrs. F. Seabrook and June are spending the week end in Edmonton.

Mr. O. Croteau is among those who started work last Thursday at the park.

HOPE VALLEY

Hello, folks! Here's that man again, with more news from the liveliest community in western Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Taylor left for Edmonton Friday, Nov. 25. While in the city they will attend the provincial convention of the Communist Party. Ewart is the delegate representing Hope Valley at the convention. Art Haddow, local representative of the Young Communist League, accompanied them.

As usual the Juniors had a busy night at their last regular meeting held at Giles School on Wednesday, Nov. 23. Jean Roach gave the news commentary for the evening and is to be congratulated on the splendid job she did. A debate on the subject, "Resolved, That Canada should not participate in war on foreign soil again" was won by the negative side, consisting of Douglas Roach and Geo. Chesterman.

The Juniors are planning to put on the second Hope Valley Varieties some time in February.

EDGERTON

The weather man certainly hands out a wide variety of temperatures "things n" stuff these days, so those of us who dislike monotony should be well satisfied.

Walt Disney's "Snow White" attracted large numbers of people during its three-day run here, Wainwright, Chauvin and Ribstone being all well represented. The majority thought it a wonderful production but we encountered a dissembler or two who growled, then mumbled something about the whole thing being stupid. All we can say is, that if only we were half as stupid as Walt Disney we should be absolutely content. Furthermore, we would have fun spending the proceeds of our stupidity, or would we?

Joey's beauty parlor is surely a busy spot these days.

Rev. A. Love is much improved and able to leave his bed but he is still under Dr. Aylesworth's care, who has forbidden him to venture outdoors yet.

Rev. Murphy came down from Edmonton to conduct services at Heath and Edgerton on Sunday. A fairly good congregation turned out to the evening service at St. Mary's and we understand that the absentee missed a splendid address. Mr. Murphy is a veteran of the church, being in his 83rd year, which is very hard to realize, for many a man half that age does not have the upright carriage and general appearance of well-being that this splendid-looking clergyman does.

We understand that Mrs. Harvey Challenger is quite ill, and will probably be confined to bed for a lengthy period.

Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Meade spent the week end with Mrs. Meade's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Challenger.

Evidence that Christmas is rapidly approaching may be seen daily at the Post Office. Increasing quantities of mail of all kinds are bringing the annual portion of woe to the postmaster. Cheer up, Mitch, it will all be over in less than a month.

By the way, we could hardly believe our eyes but we actually saw the above-mentioned gentleman busily shaving an axe last Sunday. Was it the springlike weather or his—er—wait line that prompted him?

"The Dollar Bonus"

by Carolyn Cooper

Bill Harrison grinned at the girl in his car. She didn't smile back. She looked at him angrily. He opened the door with his key.

"I forgot to tell you about that," he announced. "It's a trick car. Unless you know the secret, when you shut the door from the inside you lock yourself in and disconnect the starter. That's proof. Smart idea, huh?"

Her beautiful eyes were stony, her lips a very straight line. "Wonderful, I'm all choked up about it." "I had it installed yesterday," he said in beside her. "Where do you want to go?"

"I suppose," she stormed, "this is one of your jokes. Your stupid old car kept me from an important business engagement. You knew it would when you lent it to me."

He grew thoughtful. His lips twisted. Business. He heard the word. It was an ugly wall between them, keeping them apart. Dozens of times he had asked her to marry him. She loved him. He was certain of that. But she had no time for marriage. That's what she always told him.

Suddenly he took a deep breath, leaned towards her. "Kay," he said softly—and stopped. Why? Simply because he suddenly remembered that a week ago he had sworn he would through asking her. She had laughed about it at the time.

She didn't laugh now when he drew back. Her breath quickened. There was no doubt about it. She was surprised, and after a minute or so a kind of puzzled hurt showed in her eyes.

"I guess the store," she answered slowly. The Silver Crest Salon was a smart up-to-date shop featuring ladies' wear. Kay owned it. Bill hated it.

Kay strode through the polished doors without looking back. She went into her office and shut herself in. "I'll be busy all afternoon," she told her secretary. "Please see that I am not disturbed."

Being busy consisted of sitting in her desk chair and staring at the wall. Several blocks away in his law office Bill tried to reach her by phone. Each time he called the secretary said Miss Grant was busy.

Bill began to fret and worry. Suppose Kay had decided not to see him again? The thought brought a sharp ache in his throat. The ache increased as the afternoon wore on. At six o'clock he speeded through traffic. He was relieved to see Kay's roadster in the parking area behind her store.

The salon was empty except for Kay and a man. The man wore a brown suit and a black derby. He was tall and muscular. He had just finished putting a gag in Kay's mouth. Her feet and hands were bound tightly. She struggled and rolled on the floor. The man swore when he saw Bill.

He jumped over Kay and darted through a doorway in the back. Bill bent over Kay and took the gag out, loosened her bonds. "Oh, Bill," she cried and clung to him.

Bill kissed her. "I'll break his neck. What happened? Did he hurt you?" "No, I'm all right." She seemed afraid to let him go. "He came in after the others had gone. He meant to force me to open the safe. I—I—"

"I understand," Bill comforted. He looked down into her eyes. "I swore I wouldn't, but how about it? Why not chuck all this big business and marry me? What do you say?"

She nodded vigorously. "I say yes. This afternoon when I thought I had lost you I—I—"

He pressed her close. This time she kissed him. Presently they went outside and around to the parking area. The man in the brown suit and black derby was inside Bill's car. He was jumping up and down like a maniac. His collar and tie were torn loose. His face was a mask of fury.

Kay gave a little cry of dismay. Bill licked his lips. "That trick car was the smartest thing I ever got," he muttered.

He unlocked the door, jerked the man out and hit him. He drew back his fist again. Kay caught his arm. "Please, Bill, don't. Let him go." "But—"

"Please, Bill. We just got engaged. Don't spoil everything by fighting." Bill frowned, then shook his shoulders. "O.K.," he agreed.

The man in the brown suit shuffled away, rubbing his jaw. Later, he phoned Kay at her apartment.

"This," he said gruffly, "is the Acme Service Bureau. Was that the guy I was to phone after I tied you up?" "Yes."

"I thought that was your car. I meant to return it." "Yes."

"That poke in the jaw. There was nothing in the deal about that." Kay laughed happily. "Would a ten dollar bonus fix it up?"

The man felt his jaw again. "I guess so," he answered doubtfully. "But lady you don't know that lad's strength."

Another distinguished representative of the stage, Iva Claire, has been awarded the gold medal for good diction by the American Academy of Arts and Letters. Miss Claire, a Washingtonian, has starred in many well known plays. She said that she first became aware of clear speech at the "lucky age of 19" and that she was a good mimic and had a good ear.

The medal was first awarded in 1929. Since then other women have received the award. Edith Wynne Matthison, Julia Marlowe, Alexandra Carlisle and Lynn Fontanne.

If anyone thinks that sports and other outdoor interests have made women lose their flair for needlework you have only to learn about the exhibition of women's work that is held in New York every year. Mrs. William W. Hearst, a wife of $100 has been offered for the best original American floral design. The winner will be announced in January. Last year Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. received the gold star for the best piece of needlework.

It is particularly gratifying to educators all over the country to hear that Virginia C. Gilderleeve, Dean of Barnard College for twenty-five years, has received the sixth annual award for eminent achievement of the American Woman's Association. Jean Gilderleeve was cited as a gifted scholar in varied fields of English and Latin literature and for her vision which has broadened the scope of woman's opportunities.

An organization that could swing into action immediately if this country went to war, is the Army Nurse Corps, directed by Major Julia Catherine Stimson, of Washington, D. C. She is the only woman entitled to hold a real rank in the United States Army. The corps has 527 officers scattered at various army posts and its reserve force is the Red Cross Nurse Service with more than 62,000 nurses enrolled.

7,000 CHANCES TO FAIL
IN MAKING SWING RECORD
There are 7,000 notes in the average arrangement of a dance tune, says Mart Kenney, Vancouver orchestra leader, and one note will ruin a record. Just returned from Montreal, where he and his band made four new "sides", including "When the Moon Bids the Night Good Bye", Kenney told of the difficulties of playing for wax. "Sometimes it takes us as long as four hours to make one side," he said. "Often we'd get right near the end of the piece and then one of the boys would 'blow' a note." The first records of the first playing of "When the Moon Bids the Night Good Bye" were rushed across the continent from Montreal to Vancouver by Canadian National Express on Trans-Canada planes and Kenney was relieved to hear that they sounded O.K.

NOVA SCOTIA HAS

APPLE CROP RECORD

Latest official estimate of Nova Scotia's 1939 apple crop at 2,400,000 barrels shows that the second largest crop in the history of the apple producing areas has been produced, the largest having been five years ago. The striking feature of the crop this season, states the Nova Scotia Department of Agriculture, is the fact that approximately 80 per cent of the crop will come within the market grades of apples, which means that the crop is the largest commercial crop ever harvested. This is taken as a distinct tribute to the thorough manner in which cultivation, fertilization, and spraying have been carried out by the growers during the year.

2nd DIAL REVIEW

by Walter Dices

Wells! Wells! Wells! How many Wells's make a scare? About forty years ago a young Englishman stepped into world prominence as the author of a weird story, "War of the Worlds." Now, forty years later, a young man with a similar name steps into world prominence because of the same story. Just in case you have not heard, it was like this.

Sunday, October 30, Orson Welles, 29-year-old, radio actor, dramatist, H. G. Wells' fictional novel of the invasion of this world by the planet Mars. So realistic was the broadcast that a panic was created in sections of New York. Believing the broadcast to be fact, some listeners sprang into world prominence because of the same story. Just in case you have not heard, it was like this.

The following Monday morning reporters on daily papers, eager for flashy headlines, news on a blue Monday, made much of the story, pyramided a mild catastrophe into what amounted to a black eye for the intelligence of New York listeners.

In Edmonton, reporters hunting high and low for some Canadian who could say he heard the broadcast, discovered that Canadians were too busy tuning in CJCA's Chase & Sanborn program with blockhead Charlie McCarthy.

And while the dailies worked up their raves, radio wise-cracked about the affair. Nevertheless, station managers, executives and other officials of the biz are plenty worried and are still wondering what the eventual outcome will be.

Now that the shouting has died down at least some of the immediate effects of the strange behaviour of the populace can be estimated.

In the first place, the fact that one radio program could stampede whole sections of sophisticated New York into a panic has focused attention on various social and military implications.

For one thing, the power of radio has been clearly illustrated, and the need for well-planned use of radio has been shown.

Defence officials immediately saw what a factor radio could be in helping nations cope with abrupt emergencies. Health officials had driven home to them the fact that radio could build up such a fear of disease that health measures could be easily enforced.

Therefore it can be expected that this Orson Welles broadcast, though it created a panic, will not be without its helpful aspects for the radio industry and for the people.

A single sustaining program is capable of creating a sensation over the length and breadth of a continent, shows what a role radio already plays in the life of a nation, what a power there lies in the cultured voice of a professional announcer when it throbs with excitement.

And now it is announced that the Northern Alberta listeners will be able to hear and pass judgment on this young Orson Welles. On December 9, the Hollywood Hotel sponsors will abandon their regular show and broadcast the Orson Welles "Mercury Theatre" every Friday night, 7 to 8 p.m., from CJCA.

"DID YOU HEAR?"
Radio men are saying that "The best job among the radio trade today is Radio Daily's recent 'Gag'—The man is very fond of his wife... or any reasonable facsimile."

Hints for the Household

Conducted By Betty Barclay

Savory Minceed Cheese Sandwich
5 1/2 pound American cheese
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon mustard sauce from mustard pickle
1/4 cup mustard pickles, finely chopped
Salt
Paprika

Allow cheese to stand in a warm place to soften. Mash the cheese and blend with butter. Add remaining ingredients. Spread on thinly sliced whole wheat or rye bread buttered.

Cabbage Salad Tsalque
1/2 small cabbage, shredded
1/2 pimento, chopped
1 cup home made style pickles, chopped
1/2 to 3/4 cup mayonnaise or cooked salad dressing

Mix lightly together cabbage, pimento and pickles. Add enough mayonnaise to moisten the mixture. Serve cold.

Lemon Mincee
(Makes 1 quart—Filling for 2 pies)
1/2 cup Sunkist lemon juice
1 cup raisins, scalded, drained and chopped
3 cups finely chopped apple
1/2 cup chopped nuts
1/2 cup candied orange peel (or orange marmalade)

1 pound cranberries
1 whole orange (seedless)
1 cup sugar
Wash the cranberries and remove the stems. Put through the medium blade of the food chopper with the orange, which has been cut in quarters. Add the sugar and mix well. Store, uncovered, in ice refrigerator, until ready for use. The relish keeps indefinitely in a refrigerator.

The relish is a delicious accompaniment for meats and a useful salad ingredient as well. Try serving a generous spoonful of it on a slice of pineapple, or add a cup of cranberry mixture to lemon or orange flavored gelatin, to make a delicious molded salad.

1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

BRUCE BARTON Says

hats off to ministers' sons

Three years ago a little New England school sent three boys to one of the big eastern universities, and this last year all three of them were elected to Phi Beta Kappa, the honorary scholarship fraternity. This is an amazing record. I wrote to the headmaster to congratulate him. In answering my note he said:

"Our boys have made a very satisfactory record in all of the colleges, but these three have been outstanding. All three are sons of ministers and come from families without means."

Subtract the sons of ministers from the history of the world and you would have a mighty vacancy. Here are a few examples: (In the presidential election of 1916 both the candidates, Wilson and Hughes, were preachers' sons.) Cecil Rhodes and Harriman, financiers; Agassiz, Jenner, Linnaeus, scientists; Sir Joshua Reynolds among the artists, and Sir Christopher Wren, the architect; Hallam, Froude, Sloane, Parkman to represent the historians; Tennyson, Ben Jonson, Cowper, Goldsmith, Addison, Matthew Arnold, Emerson, and a multitude of other poets and writers.

Preachers' sons have good books, they hear good conversation, they spend their childhood in an atmosphere of idealism. If the church did nothing in a community but support a preacher and so enable him to raise a family, it would justify all its cost.

One other advantage the preacher's son has is that he has to work. He has to save, he has to live frugally. When it comes to raising the right kind of children, money seems to be about the last thing that counts.

watch the paper sale

I recently attended a meeting of men interested in the manufacture of paper. Charts were exhibited to show the trend of the business since 1929. They were very interesting.

They were interesting because there is probably no better index of general business activity than the consumption of white paper. When business is slow men write fewer letters; they make fewer memoranda; they set down fewer plans; they prepare fewer booklets; they lessen all printing and typewritten sales effort.

Looking at the charts which registered carloads and trainloads, I was reminded of a remark my father made years ago. He said, "There is no greater contrast between my childhood and the childhood of my children than the lavish use of paper. When I was a boy paper was scarce and expensive. We used it with almost painful frugality. We wrote on both sides of every sheet. We saved old envelopes for memoranda. The idea of making a few scratches on a clean white sheet and tossing it into the waste basket would have seemed almost sacrilegious."

He added that paper was so scarce in Abraham's Lincoln's boyhood that the future president worked out his arithmetic problems on the back of a wooden shovel and then carefully scraped off the pencil marks to provide a clean surface for the next night's work.

The return of prosperity so far as paper is concerned, has been realized. We all have all that we need at our fingertips. It is good to see that. Real business prosperity is not handed down from on high. It springs up out of millions of minds all figuring out and disseminating ideas by the use of paper.

Our Yield Per Acre

WELL, COUNTRY NEWSPAPERS DO NOT EXACTLY CALCULATE THEIR YIELD BY THE ACRE, BUT LIKE FARMERS, THEY DO HAVE GOOD AND POOR YIELDS. EACH SUBSCRIBER TO THE NEWSPAPER BUSINESS OFFICE IS LIKE AN ACRE TO A FARMER. SOMETIMES THEY YIELD GOOD, OTHER TIMES NOT SO GOOD. DRY WEATHER, POOR PRICES, HAIL AND FROST HAVE THEIR EFFECT ON OUR YIELD TOO AND OFTEN WE WAIT YEARS BEFORE OUR RETURNS COME IN.

IN A SHORT TIME WE WILL BE SENDING OUT NOTICES TO ALL SUBSCRIBERS IN ARREARS AND WE HOPE FOR A GOOD RESPONSE. WE DO NOT EXPECT TO GET ALL THE ARREARS BUT WE DO HOPE TO GET A GOOD YIELD. ALL WE ASK IS THAT SUBSCRIBERS TREAT US AS GENEROUSLY AS NATURE TREATS THEM.

The Ottawa Listening Post

Results this week in at least two of the three by-elections for federal honours have given food for political forecasting at Ottawa though the picture is not as clear as a complete Liberal or Conservative sweep might have made it.

Almost as interesting as the fight between the two old-line parties in Brandon was the C.C.F. vote. The third party candidate was never a dangerous contender but his 3,000 vote has been sufficient to remind the forgetful at the capital that the third party, in whatever guise it may appear by that time, will make itself felt when general election time comes around. The present mystery man of the political arena, Mr. W. D. Hurd, is said to be looking at Manitoba as the first field to sow his monetary reform oats in the hope of harvesting a crop of brand new social crediters. If he can win over the C.C.F. graft on his small but eager following of left-wing Conservatives and get the support of the present Abernethy Social Crediters he might have the makings of something fruitful enough to worry orthodox opponents. The possibility, at the moment, however, still looks remote.

The defeat of George Beaulieu, son of the former Conservative member for Brandon, has been a blow to the prestige of Hon. R. J. Manion. It is the first tangible indication of western reaction to the new Conservative Leader's prairie speaking tour. Some of the sting is removed, however, by the fact that against Dr. Manion's one Brandon visit the Liberals presented a front of four Cabinet Ministers. At least one honorable member of the King ministry has been on the ground continuously since the Brandon campaign got under way.

The picture in Ontario was clearer and perhaps more significant. A win for Karl Homuth, the Conservative candidate in South Waterloo, had been considered a possibility. His sweeping victory, which chalked up an all-time record in the riding, overreached the predictions of his most optimistic supporters. To some extent Mr. Homuth's plurality can be taken as a personal victory. But Ottawa observers see significance in the fact that an Ontario industrial riding has voted so overwhelmingly against the present Ottawa Government.

Another factor that cannot be overlooked is the absence of any provincial support for the Liberal cause. The federal party in Waterloo worked under the shadow of a passive disapproval of the Hepburn group. The Hepburn-King breach is likely to prove an increasing influence in provincial and federal politics in the coming year.

Dr. Manion's own victory in London was a foregone conclusion, though here again the size of the C.C.F. vote might give food for thought. The only real significance in the London by-election lies in the fact that Dr. Manion can now move to Ottawa to prepare for the season—a season which bids fair to supply a fertile battleground for a new leader, out to win his spurs.

All three by-elections have shown a marked absence of any forthright political issue. The trade treaty had not been announced. A Royal Commission kept the Bren gun contract out of the political arena. The Rowell Commission was still deep in its stupendous task. All these things will bear political fruit before the end of the season, which is expected to open about the middle of January.

Heralded more than a year ago with a blare of trumpets the now Rowell-less Rowell Commission has been working in complete seclusion for the past two months. It is due to come out of its shell very soon and present a symposium on the ills of Confederation which may prove a shock to provincial politicians. Word has gone out that the "gimmie" days when the provinces presented briefs to the Commission which did little more than demand more money from Ottawa and less interference, are at an end. Since that time the Commission's hand of experts has been busy reducing these demands to the common denominator of national interest and the picture they have presented is said to be quite different.

If it in any way reflects the final commission report, it is rumored that it may also put the King Government on the horns of a dilemma. In view of a probable election in the fall the government cannot afford to go all the way out on the limb of nationalism against provincialism. On the other hand, it can afford even less to shelve completely the work of a commission which it brought into being as the saviour of Confederation.

Meanwhile, under the leadership of Canada's foremost newspaper editor, John W. Diefenbaker, the Commission is preparing to hear the last word of the provinces and is stressing the fact that until the last word is spoken it is retaining an open mind. Despite its own amendments and re-writings it is not accepting the reports of its experts as its own findings and may never accept them.

Miss A. Greer was away to Edmonton for specialist treatment last week for throat trouble.

Mrs. Harry Laird and her baby daughter were here from Edmonton, visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Laird.

There was only a fair crowd at the dance put on in the theatre last Wednesday, when the orchestra of Edmonton, supplied the music.

Miss Ruth Hadden, who has been a patient in the Viking hospital since July, when she was seriously injured in a car accident there, returned on Monday to her home here.

Everyone is invited to attend the demonstration in the I.O.O.F. hall on Thursday, Dec. 8th, when the ladies' group of the Youth Training movement in town will be responsible for the programme.

We are informed that a meeting is to be held in Telford's barber shop on Thursday at 5 p.m. to organize a fish and game protective league in this district.
